A microprism focusing screen such as the Ec-A helps with manual focus by visually diffracting a subject when it is not in focus and eliminating the diffraction when the subject is in focus. The microprism focusing area occupies the center portion of the screen, and can be used with lenses that have a maximum effective aperture of f/5.6 or wider.

This screen made it easier to focus my manual-focus Rokinon 85mm/1.4 when mounted on my Canon 60D DSLR. I had previously tried the Canon EFS focusing screen, which has a roughly-ground area to facilitate focusing on the screen. Although the EFS screen did improve my focusing accuracy, I bought the Fotodiox screen hoping for further improvement.

My 40D will not focus with the center point or the top three other points. The other focus points work fine. The confirmation light in the view finder (when using the 4 bad focusing points) just keeps flashing and never confirms focus. The other focus points will stop flashing when focus has been achieved. I chose the points individually.
